In today's First Reading, we have the dramatic account of Israel's covenant with God. Moses received the commandments from God on Mount Sinai and he presented them to the people. He explained to them all the terms and expectations of the covenant and they all answered with one voice, "We will do everything that the Lord has told us." Once again Moses read the whole book of the law, the Book of the Covenant, and the people solemnly agreed to observe and obey all that was in it. Moses then took the remainder of the blood and sprinkled it over the people, saying, "This is the blood of the Covenant that the Lord has made with you." The sprinkling of blood represented the bond of life between them and God.

In the Second Reading, Jesus brings a new covenant. The blood of Jesus is offered as the perfect sacrifice to God through the eternal Spirit that can purify our inner self to rectify our relationship with God. Through this pouring out of His blood, a covenant was sealed between God and the people of God. To drink His blood is a total identity with Jesus and with His self-giving sacrifice of love. Jesus is now the mediator between God and man who offers the sacrifice of His own body and blood for the sake of humanity.

Today's Gospel brings us to the Last Supper of Jesus with His disciples. It is the first day of Unleavened Bread, the day when the Passover lamb was sacrificed. The institution of the Lord's Supper is the ultimate act of love of Jesus towards His disciples and all others who believe in Him. Jesus took some unleavened bread, said the traditional blessing, broke it and distributed it among His disciples. "Take this," He said, "this is my body." It is not just His physical body but His whole person and everything that Jesus stood for through His life, words and actions. Similarly, Jesus took the cup of wine, said a prayer of thanksgiving over it, gave it to them and again they all drank from the one cup. Jesus told them that it is His blood, the blood of the covenant, which is to be poured out on the altar of the cross for us.

Today, we are celebrating the Feast of the Body and Blood of Christ or Corpus Christi. This special feast is celebrated in remembrance of Jesus who gave His life for our salvation and called us to celebrate the Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist in His memory. Eucharist indeed is a communal celebration where we all share in the one bread and one cup.
